THE attic room at the corner of the west wing building on the 400-acre campus of Choate Rosemary Hall - a 972-student coed boarding school created in 1973 by a merger of two single-sex institutions, was a timeless daguerreotype of teenage disarray. The two bunk beds, covered in trendy colored sheets, were rumpled. Soiled socks, athletic shoes, discarded soda cans and opened books - the hardware of a busy and active student life - lay strewn about like discarded toys. Wall posters of folk heroes fought for space with more sentimental photos of families and pets. On the floor sat a clock radio with the alarm set for 7 A.M. - a clue that, unlike the old days, bells no longer tolled to waken students. Having become dependent on the billions in Federal money that support educational activity over the last two decades, few school districts, universities or colleges can imagine life without it. And Mr. Ronald Reagan and his advisers have stated that spending priorities must be subject to hard scrutiny, and cuts must be made. Moreover, longstanding quarrels between liberals who have held sway over educational policy for years and the ascendant conservatives promise clashes over such questions as the right of public schools to have nearly full claim on Federal funds, mandatory busing for racial balance, s	False	By Ernest Holsendolph	1981-01-12	TX 603189

(Houghton Mifflin, $8.95.) In 1936, on a journalistic assignment, James Agee (1909-55) and Walker Evans (1903-75) shared the lives of three sharecropper families in the Depression-gaunt South. Their report on the experience, in Agee's eloquent words and Evans's 59 devastating photographs, became one of 1941's unforgettable books. But this is more than a vivid record of a bygone time and place, for Agee wrote in a style that may be appreciated on many levels. This handsome new softcover edition is worthy of the classic it has become.	False		1981-01-12	TX 603189

Our 30-year-old brick house has casement windows and two of them have been a problem because they have lots of moisture around them. The plaster around each window is badly damaged and stained. All the windows have storm sashes, but these two are the only ones that are a constant problem. Caulking on the outside did not help. The plaster around the two windows is bubbly and falling out. Leon Danielian's kitchens - past and present - are cases in point. For more than two decades, Mr. Danielian toured the world, initially as the first American-trained premier danseur for Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and later as the guest star of the San Francisco Ballet. And when he traveled, he carried his own "kitchen," a small, battered suitcase containing condiments and cooking gear - "first Sterno, later an electric frying pan - the height of gypsy luxury," he says. Like many professional travelers, he learned that one can't trust restaurants in strange cities to serve the kind of food one wants when one wants it - like late at night after an evening performance. So Mr. Danielian cooked up simple specialties for members of t	False	By George O'Brien	1981-02-02	TX 620444
